Zimbabwe Project Managers Conference

Project Management and Governance during COVID-19

21-22 October 2021 @ Kingdom Hotel, Victoria Falls

SHORT SYNOPSIS

The annual conference of the Zimbabwe Project Managers will take place in October 2021, aiming to highlight the means and skills that Project Management professionals need in order to develop the necessary resilience for themselves, their projects and their organizations. Technical training should now be combined with principles and skills such as adaptability and resilience, complexity management and a focus on quality as well as taking initiatives and managing potential threats.

THE CONFERENCE

The global pandemic and the ensuing economic uncertainty have forever reshaped the way the world operates – from projects that have been postponed or canceled to new virtual groups. There are no guarantees for anything anymore. However, there are strategies, practices and skills that professional Project Managers can develop and utilize to secure the future of themselves, their projects and their organizations. In this context, this year's event, in line with both the developments and the new requirements of CIPMZ, will focus on the new mix of knowledge, experience and skills that will be the ticket to success.

The work of the Project Manager is as important as ever and given the automation and extensive digitization of processes (even before the outbreak of Covid-19) there is an urgent need to expand the role of the project manager to:

- Focus more on the human factor
- Embrace a growth mindset—an ethos and understanding that people will continue to learn and polish higher-level skill sets, including problem solving, critical thinking and creativity. These timeless skills can replace others as they become obsolete.
- Embody a flexible mindset as they respond to new digital transformation demands—and learning how to adapt to new realities more readily.
- Be able to align with the efforts of companies to reinvent themselves after the pandemic and to best serve the purpose and vision of the company.

THE PROJECT MANAGEMENT CONFERENCE FOCUS:

The Project Management Conference, through presentations and workshops of international and Project Management experts and practitioners, will focus on topics such as:

- Leadership, communication and influence skills that modern Project Management professionals need to develop
- New ways of working and new methodologies as well as their integration and utilization in project management
- The development of project teams with the aim of optimizing efficiency
- Alignment and involvement of increasingly demanding stakeholders
- Technological developments and how they affect and are utilized by the Project Management.
- Changes and developments in the certification and training of Project Managers by the Institute of Project Management and trends for the future of the space with expert panels
